A Beginner's Guide to the Geneva Lake Shore Path

By Lisa Schmelz

*T*he grounds of residential lakefront real estate usually aren't open to the public. However, that's not the case in Lake Geneva. Here, you'll find a breathtaking 21-mile shore path that traverses through four communities. With stunning views of the lake on one side and some of the grandest residential architecture in the country on the other, this is a free — and foot-powered — experience you're sure to remember.

Stephanie Klett is the president and CEO of Visit Lake Geneva and former Wisconsin Secretary of Tourism. Frequent shore path hikes are one of the perks of her job. Her preferred route these days is a jaunt east from Library Park in downtown Lake Geneva.

"What's not to like?" Klett reflects on the path that stretches from the Lake Geneva Public Library toward the community of Linn. "It's hilly and the views of the lake are gorgeous. I love the grandeur of the homes and I love that it's elevated. You can see the boats coming by. It's just wonderful."

Indeed, whether you want a leisurely stroll, a bit of a challenge, or plan to hike the entire shore path, there is plenty to take in. Think of it as an outdoor museum, with mansions, breathtaking gardens, blue sky and waves lapping at the shore.

But keep in mind that the beauty of the shore path is not just what unfurls before you, but that there's no set way to do this hike. Hike as much, or as little, as you like. Head west or east. The path itself is fairly narrow and hikers regularly step to the side for oncoming traffic.

Getting onto the shore path requires you to select an access point. There are four to choose from: Lake Geneva's Library Park and downtown public waterfront; Williams Bay's Edgewater Park; Fontana's Reid Park and public waterfront; and the boat launch on Linn Pier Road in the Town of Linn. Parking in all but Linn is pretty easy to secure.

Some hikers plan their shore path segments around estates they want to get up close to. Remember, though, the path is public but the homes and grounds are private property.

Stone Manor is always a favorite, even for the locals. If you've only got an hour to spend on the shore path, start at Library Park in downtown Lake Geneva and head east like Klett does to take in this jaw-dropping Beaux Arts mansion.

Though it's technically not the largest single estate anymore, because it was internally carved into luxurious condominiums, it does hold the record for being the largest estate ever constructed on this body of water. Built for Otto Young in 1899, it is a testament to the perils of cost overruns. Young thought he could get a dream summer home for $150,000. In the end, he spent nearly $2 million.

Also high on the must-see list is the Driehaus estate, called Glanworth Gardens. Getting there will take a couple of hours whether you start at Williams Bay or Lake Geneva, depending on how fast your feet move. Restored by the late Richard Driehaus, it is

STONE MANOR

Wisconsin's most expensive home and sold in January of 2022 for $36 million. A Georgian Revival, much of its grounds were designed by the Olmsted Brothers, sons of landscape designer Frederick Law Olmsted, who designed Central Park in New York and the Capitol Grounds in Washington D.C.

If you want a mix of humble and grand, consider starting in Williams Bay and heading west toward Fontana. About two miles in you'll find George Williams College. Their prairie style visitors lodge features information on the college's history and receptionists are able to answer a myriad of questions about the college and the area. Hike up the hill behind the college, and you'll be at Yerkes Observatory, whose grounds recently reopened to the public.

Less than a half a mile down the path from George Williams, still continuing west, is Norman Barr Camp. Its candy store is open "in the season" from 2-4 p.m. Ice cream cones are less than $2.

Those who start from Reid Park in Fontana and head east will be on the southern shore of Geneva Lake. Noteworthy here are Black Point Estate and Aloha Lodge.

Black Point was built for Chicago beer baron Conrad Seipp. The

GLANWORTH GARDENS

BLACK POINT ESTATE

Queen Anne Mansion was a family summer “cottage” for generations and is now owned by the State of Wisconsin and operated as a museum. Though you can’t access the mansion from the shore path, you’ll get a sense of what the family felt when they arrived at their hilltop retreat. The views of the lake here are stunning and the estate is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Aloha Lodge is east of Black Point and was built in 1900 for Tracy Drake of the famed hotel concern. Neoclassical in style, it was designed by Howard Van Doren Shaw and has been recently enlarged. It’s also a Klett favorite.

“Walking by it,” she says, “you can literally feel the history. That elegance is still very much apparent. It’s a home that radiates magnificence.”

Just like the shore path itself. ■

Helpful Hints

GO BEFORE YOU GO

Public restrooms are sparse. In Lake Geneva they are adjacent to the public library (and also on the west side of Library Park), the Visitors Center and The Riviera. Williams Bay has restrooms at the public beach house. Fontana also offers restrooms at the public beach. Linn Pier Road sometimes offers a port-a-potty. Big Foot Beach State Park has restrooms, but they are across a busy road off the shore path.

BRING WATER

There are no public water fountains except at the restrooms listed above.

WEAR COMFORTABLE SHOES

You need something that will keep your feet happy and that has good tread.

PLAN YOUR BREAKS

The public beaches and boat launches in Lake Geneva, Williams Bay, Fontana, Linn and at Big Foot Beach State Park are the only places to sit for a spell. These public access points also offer nearby restaurants.
